Bio:

Eric Piper is a multidisciplinary artist with a focus on social interaction. Piper's artwork digs for common symbols and psychological narrative in the human experience in effort to bridge the ever-evolving barriers between micro and macro social classes and cultures. Artwork, exhibitions and happenings are experimental research, learning new ways to connect artists and audiences together through art objects and action.

After undergraduate studies in Sculpture/Printmaking at Oklahoma University, Piper studied and worked alongside Academia NonGrata for two years. Returning from Estonia, Piper opened and operated a DIY gallery/venue/studio space for two years bringing hundreds of local, national, and global artists and bands together in Norman between 2014-2016. This energy was redirected into co-founding the non-profit art space Resonator Institute.

Currently Piper works with Oklahoma based art collective Oscillator. The group works to create intervention performance, happening, and immersive multidisciplinary exhibitions. Piper spearheads OSC-Press, and alternative printmaking initiative focused on publishing fine-art prints, art books, and other alternative collaborations that involve printmaking.

“Eric Piper can be labelled as a multidisciplinary artist in the strongest form, often expressing himself through installation, video, sculpture, sound, or performance. His works in printmaking, illustration, and drawings summons feelings of melancholia, dreams, love, horror, alienation, and occasionally cuteness. Piper can throw himself, without restraint, into any form to render a vision. Working collectively, or solo using hard symbolism and naive visuals to construct powerful experience. He is everywhere, especially where you don’t expect, eager to wager everything to push the limits others may see in Art.” - Gaetan Larant, New Media Artist, Toulouse, France
